MULTIPHASE PROGRAM STARTING JAN. 1978

PICKAWAY COUNTY FAMILY YMCA 474 E. FRANKLIN

GROUNDBREAKING PLANS — Bob Johnson (left) and Harold Hewitt discuss groundbreaking plans for the proposed YMCA building, about to become a reality. The official groundbreaking will be held 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Y site on Nicholas Drive just north of Nicholas Drive School. J. B. Stout Co. is the general contractor. Expected to be completed by early spring, the facility will include a swimming pool, gymnasium, locker rooms, large meeting room and offices.

Nixon Claims He Did Not Want Gifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon and his family "never claimed, believed or hoped" to keep some of the $2 million in gifts they received from foreign heads of state during his presidency, his aides say.

Nixon was described in a telephone interview from San Clemente on Friday as angry and Mrs. Nixon as deeply hurt by inferences that they intentionally kept some of the gifts.

"If it turns out that any state gifts were inadvertently sent to San Clemente, then we'll return the damn things as soon as we can," said aide Ken Khachigian.

He called any allegation that the Nixons purposely kept such presents "utterly false."

A 1966 law requires presidents to turn over to the State Department any gift worth more than $50 from a foreign government.

The Washington Post said Monday that officials in the State Department and the General Services Administration believe the Nixons kept several "missing" items, including a carpet, watches, antiques, an oil painting, a silver box, a gold necklace and several bracelets.

EPA Probes Widely Used Drug Linked With Sterility

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time this week, the federal government is investigating a widely used chemical additive that may cause sterility in men.

The newest target of an Environmental Protection Agency investigation is EDB — ethylene dibromide — found in wheat, fruits and gasoline.

The director of the EPA, Douglas M. Costle, said Friday that the agency's concern over the additive rivals its worry about DBCP — dibromochloropropane — used in cotton, soybeans and citrus fruits.

The Environmental Defense Fund, a private nonprofit group, asked the government earlier Friday to ban EDB, saying the chemical has severely affected the health of laboratory mice, bulls and chickens.

The organization cited studies by the National Cancer Institute and the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health that show the chemical produced stomach cancer in 76 per cent of the rats and 87 per cent of the mice tested.

Costle said the tests also show the two chemicals may cause cancer.

Both chemicals are used in agriculture to control worm-like nematodes that attack crops, with EDB often substituted for DBCP.

About 90 per cent of the EDB produced is used in gasoline and EPA studies have reported large traces of it near highways and gas stations. An estimated 8,800 exterminators and Citing the allegations, the U.S. chief of protocol, Evan Doherty, then said he wanted to search a file box believed to contain photographs and other records of state gifts so he could make an inventory.

Nixon's lawyers went to court to stop the government, but their bid was denied. The search is planned for next week.

Jack Brennan, Nixon's chief aide, said Friday that Mrs. Nixon was very disturbed by the stories.

"Right now she is going through stuff in the house, like the boss's jewelry, to see if there are cuff links or stuff like that," he said.

Khachigian spoke of "the really crummy implication that they have broken the law in a sense, taking things that belonged to the public."

Both aides said it is possible that in the family's hasty departure when he resigned in 1974, some gifts were packed into crates that went into storage in government facilities near the Nixon home in California.

"The problem is there were some 2,000 gifts and as far as we know, 99.9 per cent are in Washington," Khachigian said.

fumigators come in contact with the chemical daily in addition to chemical workers and gas station attendants.

An agency spokesman said that EDB, when used in gasoline, reduces lead, a government goal for several years.

Its four largest manufacturers are Dow, Great Lakes, Kerr-McGee and Michigan chemical companies.

DBCP, applied like EDB to home lawns and shrubbery, has been recalled by two manufacturers. Another firm, which distributes the chemical, has halted production voluntarily.

Two of the companies reported this week that tests showed a link between DBCP and low sperm counts among male employees working with the pesticide.

DBCP has been recalled by Dow and Shell Oil Co. Shell reported Friday that 16 of 21 employees tested after exposure to the pesticide in Mobile, Ala., and Denver have abnormally low sperm counts.

ODNR Taking 400-Foot Deep Core Samples

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The division of geological survey of the Department of Natural Resources has begun a project to obtain core samples of coal deposits 400 feet below the surface at several locations in eastern and southeastern Ohio.

"It is apparent coal will play an ever increasing role in meeting Ohio's energy needs," said Horace Collins, chief of the division. "This deep core project may enable us to pinpoint coal reserves we will rely on in the future."

Plans are to collect and analyze samples at depths as much as 1,000 feet below the land surface to determine whether it is feasible to mine the deep coal commercially.

Carter's Confidence In Lance Undiminished

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter places undiminished confidence in Bert Lance despite the disclosure that the budget director pledged the same stock as collateral on two separate loans, according to press secretary Jody Powell.

But Powell acknowledged that despite administration efforts at explanation in two White House briefings Friday, "How he acted and how he responded ... is still a question that remains to be settled and will have to be dealt with."

In fact, during the day, an aide to Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said that the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, which is planning early September hearings on Lance's financial affairs, would add the latest disclosure to its agenda.

The two briefings in one day, an occurrence seen fewer than a handful of times since the Carter administration took office, were devoted almost entirely to questions and answers about Lance.

Powell himself said in an interview Friday evening that some of Lance's dealings represented "technical violations of law." He was not more specific about what these were.

Both briefings offered Powell a chance to restate the President's support for Lance's efforts to remain as director of the Office of Management and Budget as the weeks-old, widespread inquiry into his financial dealings as a Georgia banker continues to occupy attention.

Powell did not volunteer any such reaffirmation of Carter's support and was not specifically asked to do so by reporters.

Powell said Carter had not discussed the matter with Lance and "doesn't see any reason to."

Powell had begun the day by saying he didn't have much factual information about the Lance transactions, despite the fact that bank documents outlining them had been made public by the comptroller of the currency more than a week before.

After discussing the matter with Lance during the day, Powell summoned reporters to the White House briefing room in late afternoon for another session. This time, he said, "Here is a guy that has clearly pledged the same collateral on two different loans. I'm saying he didn't intend to do so."

Powell told reporters he did not consider Lance's actions unethical nor a sign of incompetence on Lance's part. He denied there had been any discussion at the White House during the Lance matter of asking him to resign from his post as overseer of the federal budget.

The Associated Press reported Friday that documents released by the comptroller showed Lance broke a pledge he made to a New York bank.

He had agreed "to forthwith deliver" to Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. as collateral any stock he received as a dividend on National Bank of Georgia stock already held by the bank as collateral on a $2,625,000 loan to Lance.

Comptroller John Heimann did not discuss this in his report accompanying the documents, and his spokesman said this part of Lance's finances was beyond his purview.

The pledge, a standard item in large loan notes and familiar to bankers throughout the nation, was contained in an agreement signed by Lance and his wife, LaBelle, on June 30, 1976, while he was president of the National Bank of Georgia.

Such a dividend, in the form of 14,811 shares for Lance, was declared on Dec. 31, 1975. Instead of forwarding it to Manufacturers, Lance pledged it as collateral on a $150,000 loan he got from the Chemical Bank in New York. A Chemical Bank document, dated May 27, 1976, confirms that bank's receipt of the shares.

Manufacturers wrote Lance on June 2 and again on Nov. 5 seeking to have him deliver the shares, but a Manufacturers spokesman said the bank never got them. Lance paid off the Manufacturers loan in January 1977.

Fire Rages Through Embassy

MOSCOW (AP) — "We gave it our all, but there wasn't anything we could do," said one of the U.S. Marines who fought side-by-side with Soviet firemen to douse a blaze that raged through the top three floors of the U.S. Embassy here.

U.S. sources said an electrical fault appeared to have set off the fire Friday night. It was brought under control early today after causing considerable interior damage, and apparently collapsing part of the roof.

No serious injuries were reported, but one marine was treated for smoke inhalation.

The fire posed a potential security risk to the embassy's secret files and equipment. The damaged area is normally off limits to Russians.

Witnesses said embassy officials held off Soviet firemen until U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon arrived in formal dress from a dinner party and personally ordered the building opened to Soviet firemen.

Marine guards and other embassy personnel battled the stubborn blaze before firemen were let in.

Toon said he did not believe the embassy's security had been breached, but he said: "we're taking all the appropriate steps that are required."

Sources said Soviet firefighters were not permitted on the building's 10th floor, which houses the defense attaché's offices. One embassy official was heard to tell others: "Let it burn."

About 200 Soviet firefighters joined 25 marines and other security officers — all wearing oxygen masks — in fighting the blaze.

Families living in 40 embassy apartments were evacuated safely as were some 100 young people who had been dancing in the embassy's second-floor club. Many other employees, including Ambassador Toon, live elsewhere.

The mustard-colored wood, plaster and brick building, built in the 1950s, is on Moscow's busy Tchaikovsky Street about four blocks from the Kremlin.

Sources said the worst damage was done to the economic and commercial section, and the public affairs and science departments.

Soviet policemen ordered reporters and diplomats away from the front of the embassy today. A plume of yellow smoke continued to rise from the building at dawn.

Marines and other security officials discovered the flames on the eighth floor at about 10:30 p.m. — 3:30 EDT — and tried to extinguish the fire themselves. Firemen were called in 30 minutes later.

The Russians had to pry aside some of the special protective screens put up last year to shield the building from microwave radiation allegedly directed at the embassy by the Russians.

The blaze was the second at the embassy this year. On Feb. 1, a doctor's office in the embassy courtyard was heavily damaged by fire, apparently caused by a welding accident.

Sniper Kills 7, Including Self

HACKETTSTOWN, N.J. (AP) — "He had to have snapped," a friend of Emil Benoist said today after the youth who didn't make it in the Marines and left few marks as a boxer went on a shooting spree — leaving seven dead, including himself.

Police say Benoist, 20, son of a former Hackettstown councilman in this community of 12,000 in northwest New Jersey, walked along a railroad right of way with a .44-caliber rifle late Friday, picking off hikers, joggers and bikers.

Benoist lurked behind bushes near the railroad tracks and popped out to shoot his victims along the path, police said.

Police received a report of shots fired at 5:36 p.m., but it took them nearly four hours to catch up with Benoist.

At first they found three victims, all shot several times, behind an abandoned tannery adjacent to the railroad tracks.

About 10 minutes later, the crew of a westbound ConRail train sighted three other victims, all riddled with bullets, alongside the track about a half-mile away in Mansfield Township.

Police from surrounding communities joined local and state police and canine units in a search for the killer.

They were going through a cornfield when an officer spotted Benoist on the ground atop his weapon, officials said. The officer approached Benoist and began to tell him he was under arrest. But the suspect "shot himself through the face," said James Courter, first assistant Warren County prosecutor.

Friends of Benoist in this tree-lined community blamed a short stint in the Marines at Parris Island, S.C., about a year ago for what they say was a personality change in Benoist.

"He wasn't as tense or as bottled up before he went in. He really came back messed up," one friend said.

One friend said she had seen Benoist two days ago and that he didn't appear troubled. He liked his construction job for the state transportation department, she said.

Benoist was eliminated this summer in the Golden Gloves boxing championships. His father, Pierre, a civic leader here, also had been a Golden Glover.

Treat Wheat Seed To Control Smut

By GEORGE HAMRICK
County Extension Agent,
Agriculture

Seed treatment with an approved fungicide is recommended for all wheat seeded in Ohio, says C. Wayne Ellett, Extension Plant Pathologist at The Ohio State University. This treatment will insure freedom from stinking smut, sometimes called bunt, and will also minimize losses from seed decay and seedling blights, explains Ellett.

Stinking smut was reported in several fields in Ohio this year and in all cases the seed sown last autumn had not been treated with a fungicide. None of the soft red winter wheat varieties recommended in Ohio are resistant to stinking smut. Several seed treatment formulations are available that will control this smut.

In cases where seed wheat has not been treated by the seedsmen or cannot be commercially treated at an elevator, Ellett suggests obtaining a planter box formulation and using it at the time of planting. Follow the directions on the label. Seed treatment recommendations including approved materials are available in an October, 1976, mimeograph which was sent to each County Agricultural Extension Office earlier this year.

Loose smut of wheat is a potentially serious disease of wheat, but in recent years the planting of genetically resistant varieties has resulted in nearly complete control of this smut. Spelt, a relative of wheat, is susceptible to the loose smut disease. If this crop is planted and the seed is not known to have originated from certified seed fields, the seed should be treated with carboxin (Vitavax).

Swine Day Scheduled

By GEORGE HAMRICK
County Extension Agent,
Agriculture

Much new swine research will be revealed at Ohio Swine Day on September 8 at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center Western Branch near South Charleston.

One project underway concerns selection methods in swine breeding. Breeders who produce seed stock for Ohio Market hog producers have a great influence on pork quality enjoyed by consumers. The development of better selection methods also improves the profitability of the swine herd owned by the market hog producer, said H. M. Barnes, Extension Swine Specialist at The Ohio State University.

Two selection studies are underway, said L. S. Swiger, OSU and OARDC Animal Science Professor. Yorkshires selected for (1) carcass leanness and (2) rapid lean growth are being compared for the cost of producing quality lean pork. Growth, feed efficiency, carcass merit, and reproduction are being measured.

A Duroc herd is being used to test selection for a sow productivity index which combines litter size and milking ability. Boars are further selected for lean growth. Simple selection methods, rigorously followed, could benefit purebred breeders, said Swiger.

Swine producers that would like to travel with the county group should call the Extension Office 474-7534 and make reservations.

News For Homemakers

By BEVERLY S. BECHTEL
County Extension Agent,
Home Economics

Most pickle eaters prefer their pickles crisp and firm. They don't like the "wilted" taste of soggy pickles.

The ideal way to make crisp and firm pickles is through promptness and care in handling, say Robert Joseph, Extension Food Specialist, and Jean Geisman, Professor of Horticulture, at The Ohio State University.

"When 'pickles' are selected for processing at the proper stage and handled according to directions, a crispness additive is not needed," they explain.

Still, some older recipes call for alum or lime to restore this crispness, and some pickle makers feel they should add such materials. But the recommended crispness aid, powdered alum (sold as potassium aluminum sulfate), is not always available. Joseph says that some of the substitutes used are not as effective as the alum or are unsuitable for use in food.

Some homemakers, unable to locate alum, have used aluminum ammonium sulfate, which may discolor the pickles as the ammonia escapes, according to Joseph.

Other reports tell of people using agricultural lime as a crispness aid. This can be dangerous, says Dr. Geisman. He explains that it may contain impurities that are unsuitable for use in foods. He says that some of the more highly processed limes may be less likely to contain contaminants, but he recommends using alum (2 tablespoons per gallon), if at all possible, or to pickle without the crispness aid.

Both Joseph and Geisman agree that the simplest way to have high quality pickles and avoid using improper additives is to process the cucumbers as soon as possible after harvest.

Canning tomatoes that will be safe to eat is drawing questions from concerned home canners. First, they want to know if it is possible to get botulism from canned tomatoes.

Dr. Joseph answered this way: "Yes (it is possible to get botulism from canned tomatoes), but the likelihood of such an occurrence is very small." The acid level of most tomatoes is sufficient to stop growth of Clostridium botulinum. However, home canned tomatoes and tomato juice have been identified as the food source in only 16 reported outbreaks of botulism to date in the U.S. Factors that contribute to our low botulism record include cleanliness in preparation, use of acid tomatoes, disposal of obviously spoiled cans, and thorough cooking before consumption, he says.

The likelihood of getting botulism, however, is increased by several factors. One of these is pH level, or acidity level of the tomato, which is determined by laboratory tests.

As tomatoes ripen on the vine and after harvest, pH increases slightly. Also, soil fertility influences tomato pH. Available research indicates that certain soil nutrients depress organic acid formation while others increase the fruit acid content. Too, microbial spoilage of the fresh fruit may result in destruction of organic acids.

Tomato acidity varies among varieties. A study in 1969-71 by the National Canners Association showed that most tomatoes sampled were in the 4.2 to 4.3 pH range; about 1 per cent were 4.8 or above. Several sources indicate that Clostridium botulinum will not grow below pH 4.7 to 4.8 in tomatoes. The traditional minimum pH for botulism growth is 4.5.

A mild heat process is another factor. Non-spore forming microbes may survive mild heat treatments, degrade tomato acids, and produce growing conditions suitable for surviving Clostridium botulinum spores. This is unlikely unless container seal is broken, allowing air to enter, he says.

If the heating process does not thoroughly heat the contents, diffusion of acids from the fruit into the packing medium may be very slow and the pH of the packing medium may remain above pH 4.5 for an extended period. This has significance if juice of overripe tomatoes or water is used as a packing medium.

Molds may contaminate a defectively-sealed container after heat treatment. Mold growth on the food surface may reduce the acidity below the surface, allowing botulinum spores to germinate.

Another question: Are tomatoes less acid now than in previous years? Individual varieties probably haven't changed much in acidity through the years, Joseph says. New varieties are being developed for specific purposes such as mechanical harvesting. Several of these are quite low in acid. It is not safe to assume that all varieties available to consumers today have a pH below 4.5. In fact, in checking the pH of several tomatoes of each variety in their study, USDA's Eastern Regional Research Center researchers have identified four varieties that should not be canned. They are Ace, Ace 55VF, Cal. Ace and Garden State.

The practice of acidifying tomatoes at time of canning should be continued in view of the high pH values for some tomatoes. Mean pH values indicate that most tomatoes are well below the growth range of botulinum bacteria. Only a very few are in what could be considered a dangerous pH range. But, adding recommended ingredients to bring the tomatoes in the proper pH range is not difficult or time consuming and does keep you on the safe side. Citric acid appears to be the best ingredient for acidifying tomatoes and tomato juice. Food grade citric acid monohydrate (or hydrous) and anhydrous citric acid are available to most pharmacists who will react to the requests from consumers. The citric acid in lemon juice is also effective.

The amounts to use is ¼ teaspoon citric acid or 1 tablespoon bottled lemon juice per pint of tomatoes. The anhydrous form of citric acid is about 10 per cent stronger than the hydrous or monohydrate form, but it is impractical to make an adjustment for the difference in strength. And, although ¼ teaspoonful in one kitchen may differ up to 50 per cent from ¼ in another, the citric acid supplied by this recommendation is enough to cause a 0.3 to 0.4 unit reduction in pH in most tomatoes.

Bark Mulch Can Cause Toxicity Problems

By GEORGE HAMRICK
County Extension Agent,
Agriculture

Shredded hardwood bark has become one of the most popular landscape mulching materials in the last decade. However, H. A. Hoitink, Plant Pathologist at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, and F. K. Buscher, Area Extension Horticulturist, say storage practices in small sawmills can actually make the bark toxic to plants!

Hoitink says shredded bark normally has an attractive, pleasing color and textural appearance in the garden and landscape. It decomposes slowly and will last as long or longer than peat moss while adding both valuable organic matter and fertilizer material to the soil. Recently, bark has been ground to produce a product of uniform particle size. This material can also be composted and used as a potting mix.

Despite all these good attributes, homeowners and gardeners can experience plant toxicity problems if their mulch (as bark chips before processing) was improperly stored at the sawmill. Unfortunately, Buscher says bark is usually stored at many sawmills in large piles until the shipping season in the spring. Under such conditions, moist bark (especially if it is ground too fine) may become compacted so that inadequate air exchange occurs in the center of the pile.

In the absence of free oxygen, anaerobic microorganisms generate various organic acids and other chemicals. These products which have acrid odors are highly toxic to plants. Hoitink says liming sour bark to neutralize these acids is not practical.

The solution to the problem is to prevent anaerobic conditions (less than 0.5 per cent oxygen) in the center of the bark piles at the sawmill. This can be accomplished by stacking piles in windrows no higher than 8 feet for several months after the bark is removed from the trees (the period when the most rapid rate of decomposition occurs).

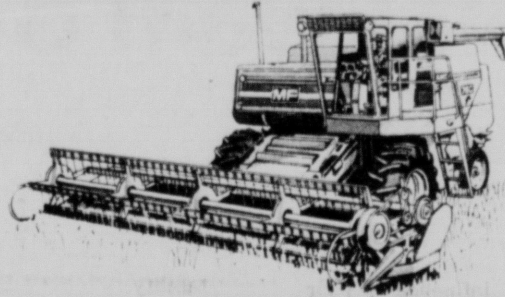

Another important factor is the moisture level of the bark in the base of the piles. It should be kept below 70 per cent on a total weight basis. This can be accomplished by providing ample drainage away from piles and by sloping edges of piles so that rain runs off.

The simplest test the consumer can use to determine if bark mulch could be harmful is to smell it. Strongly pungent bark with a penetrating and intolerable acrid odor will kill plants and should not be used. The specialists add that a pH below 4 also is an indication of potential toxicity problems.

Vitavax and Vitavax with thiram are the only chemicals available that will eliminate the loose smut fungus from infected seed. Certified Common spelt seed is available in Ohio which should be relatively free of loose smut.

Some aerial seeding of wheat is done in Ohio. This is often seeded into soybeans prior to their harvest. There are no regulations prohibiting aerial seeding with fungicide treated seed. However, if any such treated wheat seed ends up in the harvested soybeans, the grower is liable and could have the contaminated soybeans condemned if attempting to sell them for food or feed.

Ag Engineers Offer Valuable Facts At FSR

By GEORGE HAMRICK
County Extension Agent,
Agriculture

Grain drying can be really expensive. Or, it can cost less if you buy the right kind of dryer and manage it to save as much fuel as possible. To learn all about the right techniques to follow, stop by the agricultural engineering tent at the Farm Science Review's Central Exhibit Area.

There, they'll tell you the best moisture content to harvest corn, how to dry it most efficiently, how to prevent rain damage, etc. Extension and research engineers will be on hand to answer questions.

An experimental seed planter will be on display. It was built at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center at Wooster and is designed to provide a more uniform seed drop and to control the amount of compaction over the seed.

The use of foam beads for insulation will be demonstrated. This has application in greenhouses and could possibly be adapted to insulate windows in homes.

Another display in the ag engineering tent will show how soybean seed quality can be reduced by better harvesting and handling techniques.

A safe riding position for extra tractor riders will be shown. It consists of an extra seat in the cab.

A slide show on Ohio Water Use will be shown, including details on water availability, management, problems and opportunities.

At this exhibit you will learn of the economics of drainage and how corn yields can be increased 30 bushels per acre by employing tile and surface drainage together rather than surface drainage alone.

Reduced price pre-sale of tickets is now available at the County Extension Office.

'Fuzzbuster' Ban Violates Federal Law

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A Troy, Ohio, man, who says he invented the "Fuzzbuster" radar detector, said Thursday that a ban on the device in Ohio would violate federal law.

Dale T. Smith, founder of Electrofert Inc., said the 1934 Communications Act reserved policy in such areas for the Federal Communications Commission.

A bill, sponsored by Rep. Dale Locker, D-80 Anna, would outlaw in the state mechanisms "designed to be used solely for the purpose of giving the operators (of a motor vehicle) advance warning of radar used by a law enforcement officer..."

Smith's radar detector device resembles a small radio and is installed on the dashboard of an automobile or truck. It beeps when police radar is in use within the vicinity of the motor vehicle.

"People resent radar as a form of illegal surveillance," Smith said at a news conference. "They don't like wiretaps or peeping toms and they don't like a machine that says you're guilty until you prove yourself innocent."

The United States has about 186,000 gasoline service stations.

Another question: Are tomatoes less acid now than in previous years? Individual varieties probably haven't changed much in acidity through the years, Joseph says. New varieties are being developed for specific purposes such as mechanical harvesting. Several of these are quite low in acid. It is not safe to assume that all varieties available to consumers today have a pH below 4.5. In fact, in checking the pH of several tomatoes of each variety in their study, USDA's Eastern Regional Research Center researchers have identified four varieties that should not be canned. They are Ace, Ace 55VF, Cal. Ace and Garden State.

The practice of acidifying tomatoes at time of canning should be continued in view of the high pH values for some tomatoes. Mean pH values indicate that most tomatoes are well below the growth range of botulinum bacteria. Only a very few are in what could be considered a dangerous pH range. But, adding recommended ingredients to bring the tomatoes in the proper pH range is not difficult or time consuming and does keep you on the safe side. Citric acid appears to be the best ingredient for acidifying tomatoes and tomato juice. Food grade citric acid monohydrate (or hydrous) and anhydrous citric acid are available to most pharmacists who will react to the requests from consumers. The citric acid in lemon juice is also effective.

The amounts to use is ¼ teaspoon citric acid or 1 tablespoon bottled lemon juice per pint of tomatoes. The anhydrous form of citric acid is about 10 per cent stronger than the hydrous or monohydrate form, but it is impractical to make an adjustment for the difference in strength. And, although ¼ teaspoonful in one kitchen may differ up to 50 per cent from ¼ in another, the citric acid supplied by this recommendation is enough to cause a 0.3 to 0.4 unit reduction in pH in most tomatoes.

Bark Mulch Can Cause Toxicity Problems

By GEORGE HAMRICK
County Extension Agent,
Agriculture

Shredded hardwood bark has become one of the most popular landscape mulching materials in the last decade. However, H. A. Hoitink, Plant Pathologist at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, and F. K. Buscher, Area Extension Horticulturist, say storage practices in small sawmills can actually make the bark toxic to plants!

Hoitink says shredded bark normally has an attractive, pleasing color and textural appearance in the garden and landscape. It decomposes slowly and will last as long or longer than peat moss while adding both valuable organic matter and fertilizer material to the soil. Recently, bark has been ground to produce a product of uniform particle size. This material can also be composted and used as a potting mix.

Despite all these good attributes, homeowners and gardeners can experience plant toxicity problems if their mulch (as bark chips before processing) was improperly stored at the sawmill. Unfortunately, Buscher says bark is usually stored at many sawmills in large piles until the shipping season in the spring. Under such conditions, moist bark (especially if it is ground too fine) may become compacted so that inadequate air exchange occurs in the center of the pile.

In the absence of free oxygen, anaerobic microorganisms generate various organic acids and other chemicals. These products which have acrid odors are highly toxic to plants. Hoitink says liming sour bark to neutralize these acids is not practical.

The solution to the problem is to prevent anaerobic conditions (less than 0.5 per cent oxygen) in the center of the bark piles at the sawmill. This can be accomplished by stacking piles in windrows no higher than 8 feet for several months after the bark is removed from the trees (the period when the most rapid rate of decomposition occurs).

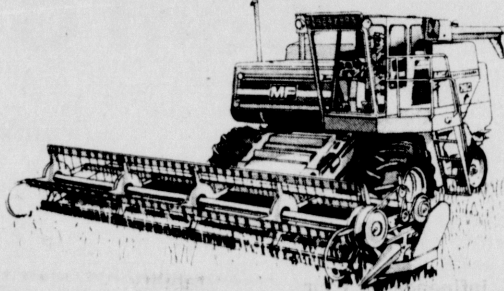

Another important factor is the moisture level of the bark in the base of the piles. It should be kept below 70 per cent on a total weight basis. This can be accomplished by providing ample drainage away from piles and by sloping edges of piles so that rain runs off.

The simplest test the consumer can use to determine if bark mulch could be harmful is to smell it. Strongly pungent bark with a penetrating and intolerable acrid odor will kill plants and should not be used. The specialists add that a pH below 4 also is an indication of potential toxicity problems.

Refuse To Discipline Visiting Grandson

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I and our 3-year-old son, Tommy, visit my husband's parents, Tommy goes on a rampage. He races through the kitchen while my mother-in-law is cooking, opens cabinets and drawers, and begs for food.

We try to discipline the boy, but his grandparents say, "Leave him alone, quit picking on him!" They claim that since it's their house, they should have the say about how Tommy should act there.

My husband and I feel that as Tommy's parents, it's our job to keep him under control, no matter where he is. Who is right?

TOM'S PARENTS: You are. Although he's only 3, Tommy is hep to his grandparents' leniency and is playing for all it's worth. To throw discipline to the winds while visiting grandparents can breed discipline problems elsewhere. Explain this to the grandparents and ask them to cooperate.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this for all fat wives:

Do all you wives who have gained a lot of weight really believe it when your husband says, "It's okay, Honey, there's just that much more of you to love?"

When hubby's eyes begin to wander, it's not to another fat woman-it's a gal with a nice trim figure.

Don't let yourself go! I did, and nearly lost my husband, but thank heavens I woke up just in time.

FORMERLY FAT
DEAR FORMERLY: Why limit the suggestion to women only? Plenty of fat men have gone under for the third time while their wives are eyeing the lifeguard.

DEAR ABBY: Your letter asking for consideration of the deaf prompts this letter. Please do as much for the blind.

Blind people are frequently treated as though they were invisible! Some people will greet their guide, and not even say hello to the blind person. This is very rude, and makes the blind person feel that he isn't even present. The blind feel, hear and have very acute perception.

Ignorance is no excuse for rudeness. Please ask your readers to speak to a blind person when he enters a room. Remember-he is exactly like a sighted person, only he can't SEE.

Toledo Man Named Ambassador To Bolivia

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced Friday he will name career diplomat Paul H. Boeker, of Toledo, Ohio, to be ambassador to Bolivia.

He would replace William P. Stedman, Jr., who has resigned.

Area Conference Planned For Retired Persons

Coping with crime, investment and estate planning, probate and wills and social security and medicare services will be the focus of the special interest sessions at the Area V Conference of the National Retired Teachers Association and the American Association of Retired Persons September 14-16 in Cincinnati at the Netherland Hilton Hotel.

Sgt. Milton Dills, Department of Safety, Division of Police for Cincinnati will discuss the role of individual and community in coping with crime.

Paul Momberg, Vice President and Secretary of the Southern Ohio Bank will speak on investment planning. Nicholas Shundich, Vice President and Trust Officer of the Southern Ohio Bank will speak on trusts.

Judge Charles M. Davies, retired Probate Court Judge from Hamilton County will discuss probate and wills.

William Diggins, Field Representative, Social Security Administration will lead a discussion on social security and medicare services.

Other special interest sessions will focus on consumer issues, home and health services, building a positive image of older adults, influencing public policy, ways to influence state and local legislation and other Association programs.

NRTA-AARP Executive Director Harriet Miller, will discuss the Associations' continuing efforts to combat "age-ism" by eliminating discrimination in credit, employment, housing and other areas of society.

A concluding luncheon on September 16, featuring Richard Scammon, nationally known Washington, D. C. political analyst and director of the Election Research Center. He will discuss political trends and the impact older persons are expected to have on future elections.

Additional activities include a pre-conference tour of Cincinnati and a reception with entertainment.

Police Charge Man With Theft Of Rings

The Circleville Police Department recovered a lady's two diamond rings and charged a Chillicothe man with grand theft Friday.

According to the report, Norma Grigsby, 464½ E. Main St., told Circleville Police Ptl. Howard Fletcher that she discovered two of her diamond rings missing at approximately 9:30 Friday morning. At about the same time, police were informed that two individuals saw a man in a downtown restaurant with two diamond rings.

Later in the day, police received a call that the same subject would be at the Grigsby residence on E. Main St. shortly before 5 p.m. The subject was apparently staying at the Grigsby residence while working with Mrs. Grigsby's husband.

Ptl. William Pontious was dispatched to the scene, and when the subject arrived, Pontious told the man that he would like to question him concerning the rings. When Pontious read the subject his rights, the man produced two diamond rings from his pocket.

A short time later, Ptl. Pontious charged the man with grand theft. The subject was identified as John Allen Crabtree, 19, of Chillicothe.

A Page Of Opinion

Welfare Proposals Opposed

Considering the array of both conservatives and liberals in Congress who already have committed themselves against the President's welfare proposals, the chances of the total package endorsed by the President making its way through Congress are little better than zero.

The way the congressional battle is shaping up, the President will be lucky to salvage even a significant part of his proposals. It is a case, most congressional critics agree, of trying to do too much too fast — with unproven programs.

Liberal Sen. William Proxmire, a key member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, labeled the Carter plan "seriously inflationary." Both the ranking Republican and Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee — which has much to say about welfare spending — are opposed.

Finance Committee Chairman, Sen. Russell Long, may have offered the President an out by suggesting the program be tested on a pilot basis "for a few years." The President should consider Long's suggestion, while reviewing the advice he has been receiving from within the administration.

Pro And Con

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK — As most of us on the far side of age 40 are aware, Congress is seriously considering the idea of abolishing mandatory retirement at 65 — a traditional practice which has been called "statutory senility."

Already, the House Labor Committee has approved legislation that would raise to age 70 the earliest time an employer could force retirement on anyone who wanted to continue working. This is encouraging to many fair-minded Americans who feel mandatory retirement, at any age, is a violation of the First Amendment, discriminatory against a minority known, loosely and ambiguously, as "the aged."

To be effectively kicked out of the system against one's will is very wrong, in terms of our democratic ideals, which say every person should be treated as an individual," points out Garson Kanin, whose book on the subject, "It Takes a Long Time To Become Young," comes out next winter. In fact, like good wines and a variety of other valued commodities, age in humans often means better.

"The top law school in the country is the Hastings College of Law, at Stanford University. It's been excellent for about 40 years — and you can't get on the faculty unless you're over 65. The dean is 81, and he gets all the top, mandatorily retired professors from all the stubborn universities that kick out their best men at the peak of their knowledge. God, just imagine it. The best talent in America, on one campus!"

Curiously, or so it would seem on the face of it, the executives of corporations are the chief opponents to the new movement toward extending the retirement age. In a nationwide poll, the majority of chief executives of companies see no reason for changing the present rules.

The survey, "Employer Attitudes Toward Mandatory Retirement," was conducted by William M. Mercer, Inc., the country's largest employee-benefit consulting firm; it sent out a lengthy questionnaire in April to top officers of companies covering a broad spectrum of U.S. business. Four hundred replies were received — considered a good return. The results:

Sixty-five per cent of the bosses surveyed said they favored mandatory retirement, and sixty per cent of the companies responding indicated they had such a policy. Of those, 75 per cent saw no reason for altering the age-65-out policy.

The biggest reason cited for clinging to retirement at 65: "need to create job openings and advancement opportunities for younger people."

Nearly half of the executives (40 per cent), in fact, favored plans to allow employees to retire in their fifties. The reasons cited were that early retirement allows their companies to rid themselves of poor performers, and lets employees pursue personal interests at an earlier age.

Asked if they believe that "mandatory retirement is discriminatory and violates the equal protection clause of the constitution," 60 per cent of the executives responded "no."

The majority also rejected the growing public opinion that mandatory retirement "forces people to be idle and not contribute to society."

Unfortunately, the survey did not include data on the ages of the chief executive officers who were polled.

However, it is well known in corporate circles that men who have reached the top rungs of the ladder are rarely retired forcibly; if they are capable of effectively administering their positions, presidents and board chairmen of industry often remain in power well into their seventies, sometimes their eighties. So they need not personally feel threatened by the mandatory retirement laws which they now favor retaining.

The head of a large executive-search firm recently told me that age is no barrier in the top ranks of business management; "If a man is a proven performer in a top executive post, he will be in demand regardless of age," he said.

It is understandable, then, if not particularly laudable, that these men are voting for the status quo.

What effect their clinging to the mandatory 65 retirement age may have on the Congressional movement toward extending the career life-spans of the rest of the people is still unknown.

But it appeared ominous when the survey of "the people who play a central role in setting retirement policies" revealed that "companies would appear to have the retirement policy they desire."

Congress is not famous for thumbing its nose at Big Business.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

My feet have been hurting for two months. Now they're beginning to swell. It's difficult for me to get to a doctor. I wonder if you can help me.

Mr. P. D., N.D.

Dear Mr. D.: I wish I could help you but I can't. If I even tried to I would be furthering the trap you have fallen into by not seeing a doctor as soon as your feet began to hurt and to swell.

So that you will not feel that I am abandoning you, let me show you how many conditions must be considered by the doctor confronted with your problem. The cause might be:

- 1 — Circulatory disturbances of the heart.
- 2 — Kidney disease
- 3 — Liver disease
- 4 — Varicose veins
- 5 — Injuries, sprains or tears of the ligaments.
- 6 — excessive heat.
- 7 — Dietary and vitamin deficiency.
- 8 — Arteriosclerosis, with narrowing of the blood vessels of the legs and feet.
- 9 — Hormone imbalance.
- 10 — Allergies
- 11 — Water and mineral imbalance.
- 12 — Persistent use of drugs.
- 13 Infections.

Additional reasons could be listed, but you've already gathered that any diagnosis other than the one made by the doctor who examines you would be pure guesswork.

When so many possibilities present themselves, you can understand how imperative it is that you find a means of transportation, by ambulance, if necessary, so that the exact condition can be pinpointed and treatment begun.

My boss is sick. He has cancer. Is there any danger in visiting him at the hospital?

Miss G. T., Fla.

Dear Miss T.: There is no reason why you should not fulfill this important social obligation. Cancers are not contagious. They cannot be passed from one person to another by contact.

Many people are concerned about visiting patients in hospitals for fear of catching a disease. Hospitals are very careful. Highly infectious cases are isolated and no visitors are allowed until the period of contagion is passed.

Unfortunately, the protective attitude towards visitors cannot always be extended to patients themselves. Far too often, visitors with active colds will subject patients to their infection during a visit.

(And what about the visitor who fills the patient's room with smoke . . . and the one who stays too long?)

Astarte was the Phoenician goddess of fertility and love.

Dear Editor:

The passing of the late James H. Fouch, service officer for the Circleville Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, was a great personal loss to many of us who knew Jim and had the privilege of working with him in service work over the years.

He was a very compassionate and devoted individual and his record indicates that he was active and served his fellow comrades, their widows and families in your county for a period of about 40 years, which is an outstanding record of love for his community and fellow man.

Your community and Pickaway County can be most proud of this dedicated public servant.

NEW YORK (AP) — A $91 million government suit against Chrysler Corp. was dismissed this week by a federal judge who said in effect that the government just didn't have a case.

The dismissal didn't make many headlines, but perhaps it should have, just as there were headlines when the case was filed. At that time it was said that Chrysler failed to meet clean air standards.

In the year that followed, Chrysler said it spent about $100,000 for out of pocket legal expenses, but probably lost untold millions because of diminished sales and reputation. "We were made to look like villains," said a spokesman.

The problem began last year in the production of 9,185 Plymouths and Dodges. They were accidentally equipped with an emission item that failed to meet the precise description of a similar item installed by Chrysler on a government test car.

The test car already had been certified by the Environmental Protection Agency as meeting its standards. It expected all production models to have precisely the same equipment. Chrysler, the EPA said, failed to comply.

The error was as much clerical as mechanical in the sense that the item, which cost less than $10 installed, made almost no difference in the emissions exhausted. Chrysler found and corrected the error. It told the EPA. It recalled cars.

The EPA agreed that improper device met its emission control requirements in most instances. It even certified the device to be installed on cars built in the future.

But, it said, Chrysler had violated the EPA certification program on those 9,185 cars already produced, and it was going to make a stand. Chrysler officials met with the EPA and Justice Department seeking to resolve the dispute.

"They told us to pay $1 million and sign a consent decree," said Sidney Terry, vice president for public responsibility and consumer affairs. "We said it sounded like blackmail."

The Justice Department then filed suit for $10,000 a car, not because the atmosphere was threatened, but because it felt the regulation was.

Stunned, the Chrysler officials returned to Detroit and prepared a defense against what Terry said was an "incredible" suit over "a simple, unintentional human error" that didn't change the standard and which was corrected anyway.

The EPA said that while its regulation clearly stated that fraud called for a fine, it felt there might be nonfraudulent violations of its program that might also be adjudged fineable.

A Page Of Opinion

Welfare Proposals Opposed

Considering the array of both conservatives and liberals in Congress who already have committed themselves against the President's welfare proposals, the chances of the total package endorsed by the President making its way through Congress are little better than zero.

The way the congressional battle is shaping up, the President will be lucky to salvage even a significant part of his proposals. It is a case, most congressional critics agree, of trying to do too much too fast — with unproven programs.

Liberal Sen. William Proxmire, a key member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, labeled the Carter plan "seriously inflationary."

Both the ranking Republican and Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee — which has much to say about welfare spending — are opposed.

Finance Committee Chairman, Sen. Russell Long, may have offered the President an out by suggesting the program be tested on a pilot basis "for a few years." The President should consider Long's suggestion, while reviewing the advice he has been receiving from within the administration.

Pro And Con

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK — As most of us on the far side of age 40 are aware, Congress is seriously considering the idea of abolishing mandatory retirement at 65 — a traditional practice which has been called "statutory senility."

Already, the House Labor Committee has approved legislation that would raise to age 70 the earliest time an employer could force retirement on anyone who wanted to continue working. This is encouraging to many fair-minded Americans who feel mandatory retirement, at any age, is a violation of the First Amendment, discriminatory against a minority known, loosely and ambiguously, as "the aged."

To be effectively kicked out of the system against one's will is very wrong, in terms of our democratic ideals, which say every person should be treated as an individual," points out Garson Kanin, whose book on the subject, "It Takes a Long Time To Become Young," comes out next winter. In fact, like good wines and a variety of other valued commodities, age in humans often means better.

"The top law school in the country is the Hastings College of Law, at Stanford University. It's been excellent for about 40 years — and you can't get on the faculty unless you're over 65. The dean is 81, and he gets all the top, mandatorily retired professors from all the stubborn universities that kick out their best men at the peak of their knowledge. God, just imagine it. The best talent in America, on one campus!"

Curiously, or so it would seem on the face of it, the executives of corporations are the chief opponents to the new movement toward extending the retirement age. In a nationwide poll, the majority of chief executives of companies see no reason for changing the present rules.

The survey, "Employer Attitudes Toward Mandatory Retirement," was conducted by William M. Mercer, Inc., the country's largest employee-benefit consulting firm; it sent out a lengthy questionnaire in April to top officers of companies covering a broad spectrum of U.S. business. Four hundred replies were received — considered a good return. The results:

Sixty-five per cent of the bosses surveyed said they favored mandatory retirement, and sixty per cent of the companies responding indicated they had such a policy. Of those, 75 per cent saw no reason for altering the age-65-out policy.

The biggest reason cited for clinging to retirement at 65: "need to create job openings and advancement opportunities for younger people."

Nearly half of the executives (40 per cent), in fact, favored plans to allow employees to retire in their fifties. The reasons cited were that early retirement allows their companies to rid themselves of poor performers, and lets employees pursue personal interests at an earlier age.

Asked if they believe that "mandatory retirement is discriminatory and violates the equal protection clause of the constitution," 60 per cent of the executives responded "no."

The majority also rejected the growing public opinion that mandatory retirement "forces people to be idle and not contribute to society."

Unfortunately, the survey did not include data on the ages of the chief executive officers who were polled.

However, it is well known in corporate circles that men who have reached the top rungs of the ladder are rarely retired forcibly; if they are capable of effectively administering their positions, presidents and board chairmen of industry often remain in power well into their seventies, sometimes their eighties. So they need not personally feel threatened by the mandatory retirement laws which they now favor retaining.

The head of a large executive-search firm recently told me that age is no barrier in the top ranks of business management; "If a man is a proven performer in a top executive post, he will be in demand regardless of age," he said.

It is understandable, then, if not particularly laudable, that these men are voting for the status quo.

What effect their clinging to the mandatory 65 retirement age may have on the Congressional movement toward extending the career life-spans of the rest of the people is still unknown.

But it appeared ominous when the survey of "the people who play a central role in setting retirement policies" revealed that "companies would appear to have the retirement policy they desire."

Congress is not famous for thumbing its nose at Big Business.

Marriage Solemnized During Afternoon Rites

MR. AND MRS. JAMES R. MOOREHEAD

Miss Rebecca L. Williams, became the bride of Mr. James R. Moorehead in a 5:30 p.m., ceremony July 23.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Violet J. Williams, of Washington, C. H., and the Rev. Charles I. Williams, of Parkersburg, West Virginia. Mr. Moorehead is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Moorehead, 475 N. Court St.

The Rev. Charles I. Williams, father of the bride presided at the ceremony before the altar of the Church Of Christ In Christian Union, Washington C. H.

The altar of the church was flanked with candelabras.

Pianist was Jenni Cox. Mr. William Walters was vocalist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She selected a formal length gown of white qiana trimmed with Venice lace. The gown featured a Victorian collar and long sleeves and flowing skirt. Her fingertip veil of bridal illusion was trimmed with Venice lace and caught to a bridal cap of Venice lace. She carried a bouquet of white and pink roses, cornflowers and baby's breath.

Miners Still Not Working

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Although no pickets were to be seen in the Cabin Creek section of southern West Virginia, miners weren't returning to work. Some feared more gunfire between those who favor and those who oppose a wildcat strike.

"The men I talked to aren't working because they don't want to have to take guns to work," said a tall, curly-haired Cabin Creek miner who asked not be identified. Shots were fired in Leewood, along the creek, Wednesday night; no one was injured.

The Cabin Creek miners are among 30,000 members of the United Mine Workers in West Virginia and Kentucky staging a wildcat strike to protest cuts in union health benefits.

A spokesman for the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, which controls the health benefits funds with the UMW, said Thursday that a response would be made today to a renewed request from UMW President Arnold Miller for a meeting about the benefits cuts.

And as a back-to-work movement begun earlier this week appeared to collapse, Miller attacked the leaders of his union's largest district for failing to end the wildcat.

Neither Jack Perry, president of Charleston-based District 17, nor vice president Cecil Roberts, "have done much down there to get the men back to work," Miller said.

And Miller said Roberts was promoting the strike. "He's right in the middle of it. He's behind it all," Miller charged. Miller said Roberts went to Leewood Wednesday night.

In Raleigh County, a confrontation was reported between miners and policemen at an Eastern Associated Coal Corp. mine at Stotesbury. Deputies arrested a picket — Richard Akers, 29, of Matewan — for brandishing a weapon.

After the arrest, pickets surrounded three deputies. "The pickets made a circle around us. They got really belligerent in making accusations and threats against us," said Bob Belcher, chief deputy. The pickets left when threatened with arrest, Belcher said.

Marching Corps Holds Practice And Cookout

The Circleville Area Cadets held a regular practice on August 22 in preparation for the Jackson Apple Festival.

Following the practice a cookout with games was held at the home of Eloise Ford.

The group participated in Laurelville Firemens Parade and the Commercial Point Homecoming parade.

Persons interested in further information about the group should call 474-6598, 983-3982 or 474-2379.

BPW Holds Annual Picnic Session

The Annual Picnic of the Circleville Business and Professional Women's Club was held August 25th at Ted Lewis Park. Special greetings were given Marcella Hostetler, a guest and Mary Howard one of the four charter members.

During business conducted by Sallie Dupler, initial plans were made for 1977-78 programming which is to be guided by criteria arranged by Judge Virginia Weiss and Delores Chambers, Ohio Federation of B.P.W. Clubs President and Program Chairman. This includes involvement in projects designed to provide reciprocal benefits for youth, senior citizens, and community service centers.

Before the membership meeting scheduled for September 22nd, Mrs. Dupler will meet with the officers and committee chairwomen to complete plans for the year.

Bing Crosby Visits Norway

OSLO, Norway (AP) — "Oh, what a beautiful morning. Oh, what a beautiful day," hummed crooner Bing Crosby, as he stepped from an airliner into the foggy drizzle at Oslo's Fornebu Airport.

Crosby, 72, arrived here Thursday on his first visit to perform at "Momarkedet," a yearly fund-raising fun fair arranged by the Norwegian Red Cross.

Crosby's Oslo performance Saturday will include excerpts from a jubilee show he will present later in London to celebrate his 50th year in show business.

State Building Board Causes Waste Of Taxpayers' Dollars

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's board of building standards apparently has caused 57 cities and nine counties to waste thousands of taxpayers' dollars by changing its mind about which national building code the state should adopt.

It voted Sept. 16, 1976, to recommend the code of an organization based in Whittier, Calif., followed up that action in October by urging Ohio's local governments by mail to join, then on July 29 decided to recommend another organization with headquarters in Chicago.

In the interim, Akron, Canton, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Springfield, Mansfield and 50 other cities paid population-based dues, ranging from $60 to $350, to the Whittier-based International Conference of Building Officials (ICBO).

Some spent thousands more on training manuals and for seminars ICBO has been conducting around the state, hopeful the uniform model code would be adopted Jan. 1, 1978, as the board originally suggested.

Akron spent more than $20,000, Cleveland from $16,000-$20,000.

The 11-member board, being accused in some quarters of basing its decision on politics, planned a routine meeting today and was almost certain to be confronted by some city officials although the subject was not an agenda item.

Akron's superintendent of building inspections, David A. Smith Jr., said he hoped to get an explanation of the July 29 reversal in favor of the code of the Building Officials and Code Administrators (BOCA), based in Chicago.

Smith, newly elected president of the Ohio Building Officials' Association, said he had written the board and its chairman, Frank M. King, asking for an explanation and also requesting information as to what the board can do so that city officials throughout the state "can have our confidence (in the board) restored."

The Akron official said he hopes to get the answers and thinks "a major storm could be brewing throughout the State of Ohio."

King, former president of the Ohio AFL-CIO, could not be reached for comment Thursday due to a reported illness in his family.

State Rep. Edward J. Hughes, D-59 Mentor, complained about the switch earlier this week in a letter to King, stressing his opinion that the board "has further obligation in this matter." Mentor and Lake County became members of ICBO.

Hughes, who sent copies of his letter to all of the other 98 members of the Ohio House, said he has heard that the switch to BOCA involved politics, and that some board members had attended BOCA's annual convention in Canada this summer before deciding to scrap the ICBO recommendation.

It was learned that five board members—King, along with Edward Cole of Toledo, David DeMeo of Canton; along with Gavin Gray and Ralph Balsly, both of Cincinnati, attended the BOCA convention in Toronto May 29-June 3, reportedly at BOCA's expense, about seven weeks before the board reversed its decision.

All board members, including Democrat King, are appointees of GOP Gov. James A. Rhodes

Women's Republican Club Held Luncheon Meeting

A Pre-Labor Day Luncheon Meeting of the Pickaway County Women's Republican Club took place, August 22, at the Pickaway Arms, Circleville.

An enthusiastic group participated in a detailed program outlined by Miss Lucille Dumm, president.

The Lord's Prayer was led by Mrs. H. O. Caldwell, former president. Mrs. Marjorie Smith led in singing "The Star Spangled Banner", accompanied by Mrs. Mabel Louis, also, Mrs. Smith directed in more singing later. Leader for giving the "Pledge of Allegiance" was Mrs. Laura Hatfield.

Members who were ill were remembered.

As the Fall Quarter approaches, the future Bylaws for the Club and Committees underwent study.

Much discussion followed when present day issues and topics were presented by Miss Dumm.

Plans and committees were outlined in preparation to attend the Fall Conference of Ohio Republican Womens Organizations at the Columbus Hilton Inn, September 28-29. Final deadline for reservations is September 21. Please contact Miss Dumm or Mrs. Donna Foreman before this date if you plan to attend.

King, asking for an explanation and also requesting information as to what the board can do so that city officials throughout the state "can have our confidence (in the board) restored."

The Akron official said he hopes to get the answers and thinks "a major storm could be brewing throughout the State of Ohio."

King, former president of the Ohio AFL-CIO, could not be reached for comment Thursday due to a reported illness in his family.

State Rep. Edward J. Hughes, D-59 Mentor, complained about the switch earlier this week in a letter to King, stressing his opinion that the board "has further obligation in this matter." Mentor and Lake County became members of ICBO.

Hughes, who sent copies of his letter to all of the other 98 members of the Ohio House, said he has heard that the switch to BOCA involved politics, and that some board members had attended BOCA's annual convention in Canada this summer before deciding to scrap the ICBO recommendation.

It was learned that five board members—King, along with Edward Cole of Toledo, David DeMeo of Canton; along with Gavin Gray and Ralph Balsly, both of Cincinnati, attended the BOCA convention in Toronto May 29-June 3, reportedly at BOCA's expense, about seven weeks before the board reversed its decision.

All board members, including Democrat King, are appointees of GOP Gov. James A. Rhodes

Women's Republican Club Held Luncheon Meeting

A Pre-Labor Day Luncheon Meeting of the Pickaway County Women's Republican Club took place, August 22, at the Pickaway Arms, Circleville.

An enthusiastic group participated in a detailed program outlined by Miss Lucille Dumm, president.

The Lord's Prayer was led by Mrs. H. O. Caldwell, former president. Mrs. Marjorie Smith led in singing "The Star Spangled Banner", accompanied by Mrs. Mabel Louis, also, Mrs. Smith directed in more singing later. Leader for giving the "Pledge of Allegiance" was Mrs. Laura Hatfield.

Members who were ill were remembered.

As the Fall Quarter approaches, the future Bylaws for the Club and Committees underwent study.

Much discussion followed when present day issues and topics were presented by Miss Dumm.

Plans and committees were outlined in preparation to attend the Fall Conference of Ohio Republican Women's Organizations at the Columbus Hilton Inn, September 28-29. Final deadline for reservations is September 21. Please contact Miss Dumm or Mrs. Donna Foreman before this date if you plan to attend.

Members were urged to write to

Kansas City Edges Orioles, 3-2

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer
"It's not how you look out there," said Kansas City left fielder Hal McRae. "If I had good looks, I'd be in Hollywood."
McRae was in Baltimore Friday night with the rest of the Royals, who won their 10th straight game, a club record, by edging the Orioles 3-2. McRae, who usually serves as the team's designated hitter because of his below-average defensive ability, made a key play in left field that helped the Royals maintain a three-game lead over Chicago and Minnesota in the American League West.

"I was playing fairly close and I think they were trying to take advantage of my arm," said McRae after he had cut short a Baltimore rally in the second inning by throwing out Mark Belanger at the plate after catching Al Bumbry's liner. "It didn't work."

"People keep saying there are things I can't do, and I guess throwing is one of them. But I get the job done and throw some people out."
McRae, the defending AL batting champion, did the job at bat as well, hitting his 17th home run to extend his hitting streak to 10 games.
In other American League games, New York rallied from a 5-1 deficit to nip Texas 6-5, Minnesota defeated

Boston 6-4, Chicago took Milwaukee 4-2, Seattle overcame Cleveland 4-2, California took 11 innings to top Detroit 7-4 and Oakland beat Toronto 8-4.
Yankees 6, Rangers 5
There were several heroes in New York's come-from-behind triumph. Willie Randolph's third hit of the contest, a double in the eighth, was followed by Mickey Rivers' single to tie the game. Then Graig Nettles tripled home Rivers with the game-winner.
Sparky Lyle pitched the ninth and picked up his fifth save in his last seven appearances and his 21st of the year. And Lou Piniella went 3-for-3, including his seventh home run, and also had a sacrifice fly.

Reds, Dodgers Both Win

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer
After 10 major league seasons, Tom Seaver finally has learned to do it the hard way...and win.
Seaver fired a five-hitter and struck out seven in recording his seventh straight victory Friday night as the Cincinnati Reds handed the Philadelphia Phillies their third consecutive loss, 4-2.
But those weren't the statistics that impressed the threetime Cy Young Award winner, who won his eighth game in 10 decisions since being traded to the Reds by the New York Mets June 15.

It was the walks.
"I can't ever remember walking eight and winning the game," said Seaver. "I was searching for my rhythm all night, but I don't think I ever found it. I was wild high and just outside of the strike zone."
Winning is something Seaver has become accustomed to with the Reds, who have won 10 of their last 13 games and now trail the Los Angeles Dodgers by 8½ games in the National League West race.

"We know we've got a chance to catch the Dodgers," said Dave Concepcion, who drove in the winning run for Cincinnati in the seventh inning to prevent Steve Carlton from getting his 19th victory of the season.

In other games, Los Angeles edged St. Louis 5-4, Pittsburgh topped San Diego 3-1, Houston shaded Montreal 6-5 in 10 innings, Atlanta defeated the New York Mets 5-3 in a game called after 6½ inning by rain and Chicago beat San Francisco 5-2.

Dodgers 5, Cardinals 4
Ron Cey and John Oates slugged home runs in support of Rick Rhoden's 15th victory of the season as the Los Angeles defeated St. Louis for only the third time in nine meetings this season.
Rhoden, 15-8, earned the victory despite giving up four runs on nine hits in 52-3 innings. Mike Garman, who hurled the final two innings, recorded his eighth save of the season.
Lou Brock of the Cards, needing one stolen base to match Ty Cobb's career record of 892 career thefts, was hitless in four at bats and was on base only once with a walk. He never got past first.

Pirates 3, Padres 1
Bruce Kison and Rich Gossage combined for a six-hitter and Dave Parker hit his 18th homer of the season as the Pirates moved to within 5½ of the Phillies in the NL East.

Frank Taveras paced Pittsburgh's 15-hit attack with four hits and a run batted in while Kison and Parker each had three hits and an RBI. The Padres, who have dropped eight of their 10 meetings with the Pirates, scored on Dave Kingman's 20th home run.

Astros 6, Expos 5, 10 innings
Art Howe's fielder's choice grounder with the bases loaded in the 10th inning scored Cesar Cedeno with the winning run, giving Houston its third triumph in a row.
The Astros, who trailed 5-1 in the fifth, loaded the bases off Don Stanhouse on Cedeno's double, an intentional walk to Jose Cruz, Bob Watson's grounder and an intentional walk to Joe Ferguson. Howe followed with his grounder to third baseman Larry Parrish, who threw to the plate on an attempted force play on Cedeno, but catcher Gary Carter bobbled the ball.

Tony Perez blasted a pair of home runs as the Expos had a five-game winning streak snapped.

Braves 5, Mets 3, 6½ innings
Jeff Burroughs, Gary Matthews and Junior Moore belted home runs as Atlanta exploded for five runs after two were out in the third inning and defeated New York in a game called after 6½ innings by rain.

Preston Hanna recorded his first major league victory while Mets starter Jerry Koosman suffered his 16th defeat.

Cubs 5, Giants 2
Rick Reuschel posted his 18th victory of the season, tying Philadelphia's Steve Carlton for the major league lead, and singled to drive in the first two Chicago runs as the Cubs broke a three-game losing streak.

Reuschel, 18-5, allowed seven hits, struck out four and walked none in seven innings but needed relief help from Willie Hernandez and Bruce Sutter, who picked up his 25th save.

Jose Morales clouted a tworun homer and Steve Ontiveros smashed a solo shot for the Cubs, who still trail the Phillies by 8½ games.

The victory moved New York three games ahead of Boston and four in front of Baltimore in the AL East.

Twins 6, Red Sox 4
Tom Johnson pitched two innings of shutout relief and Rod Carew broke out of a mild slump with two doubles as Minnesota handed Boston its eighth loss in the last nine games.

Carew doubled off the left field wall in the fifth to drive in two runs, then doubled and scored the winning run on Lyman Bostock's single in the eighth. Johnson then shut the door on the Red Sox, who had rallied for three runs in the seventh.

White Sox 4, Brewers 2
Oscar Gamble's 26th home run of the year, a three-run blast in the first inning, powered Chicago past Milwaukee. Gamble also doubled and singled.

Steve Renko, whom the White Sox obtained from the crosstown Cubs just eight days ago, chalked up his second straight victory as an American Leaguer.

Mariners 4, Indians 2
A three-run rally in the ninth inning provided Seattle with only its third triumph in 19 games. Carlos Lopez' single tied it, then Craig Reynolds singled in the winning tally and Steve Braun doubled in the final run.

Enrique Romo, 6-9, hurled three innings of one-hit relief after John Montague came on in the first inning for faltering starter Paul Mitchell and pitched 5-13 innings of effective ball.

Angels 7, Tigers 4, 11 innings
Bobby Bonds took over the AL lead in home runs when he belted his 31st with a man on base in the 11th inning to lead the Angels over the Tigers.

Detroit tied it in the ninth on Aurelio Rodriguez' two-out double. Jerry Remy also blasted a homer for California and Bob Adams hit one out for Detroit.

A's 8, Blue Jays 4
Pedro Torrealba, 4-4, blanked Toronto on two hits over the final 42-3 innings as Oakland won its third straight. Mitchell Page drove in three runs, two with a double in the A's three-run sixth.

Jim Hoover Third In Bass Tourney

Jim Hoover of Circleville, who had won the Mid America Bass Fisherman's Tournament at Berlin Reservoir earlier this year, placed third last week in another.

Hoover's 2-pound 11-ounce fish also won the big bass honors in the tournament. He received $132 in cash and two trophies.

The tournament was the fifth of six in the eastern division of the Mid America Bass Fishermen's Assn.

Jim Blair of Parkersburg, W. Va., used a white spinnerbait in shallow water to boat two bass that weighed three pounds three ounces and claimed first place in the tournament, worth $264 in cash, a trophy and an automatic berth in Mid America's 1977 tournament of champions.

A white spinnerbait was also the choice of Bob Bateman of Cleveland which he used to catch two bass weighing three pounds. He took home $182 in cash and a trophy.

In the points race to the title "Tournament Fisherman of the Year", Victor Lemieux of Willoughby grabbed the lead with a sixth place finish which gave him a cumulative total of 216½ points and a scant 3½-point lead over Gary Crofut of Richwood.

The next event on the tournament calendar for Mid-America's Eastern Division will be the Indian Lake Invitational to be held Sept. 3 on Indian Lake near Lakeview.

Babe Ruth World Series Final Tonight

NEWARK, Ohio (AP) — Brilliant relief pitching by Greg O'Rear helped Huntsville, Ala., defeat New Orleans, La., 8-3 Friday night and advance to the finals of the Babe Ruth World Series baseball tournament.

Huntsville will meet unbeaten Brooklyn, N.Y., in the championship game Saturday night. Brooklyn needs just one victory to claim the title, while Huntsville, with one loss in the double elimination tournament, would have to beat Brooklyn twice to win the championship.

O'Rear was called into the game with one out in the top of the fifth inning and the score tied 3-3. He retired the next eight batters, striking out five.

Meanwhile, his teammates put Huntsville ahead 5-3 in the bottom of the inning with an RBI double by Kevin Cassidy and a run-scoring sacrifice fly by Jim Burleson.

Huntsville added two insurance runs in the sixth inning on two walks and singles by Ricky Moore and Burleson, the latter driving in two runs.

Jim Hoover of Circleville, who had won the Mid America Bass Fisherman's Tournament at Berlin Reservoir earlier this year, placed third last week in another.

Hoover's 2-pound 11-ounce fish also won the big bass honors in the tournament. He received $132 in cash and two trophies.

The tournament was the fifth of six in the eastern division of the Mid America Bass Fishermen's Assn.

Jim Blair of Parkersburg, W. Va., used a white spinnerbait in shallow water to boat two bass that weighed three pounds three ounces and claimed first place in the tournament, worth $264 in cash, a trophy and an automatic berth in Mid America's 1977 tournament of champions.

A white spinnerbait was also the choice of Bob Bateman of Cleveland which he used to catch two bass weighing three pounds. He took home $182 in cash and a trophy.

In the points race to the title "Tournament Fisherman of the Year", Victor Lemieux of Willoughby grabbed the lead with a sixth place finish which gave him a cumulative total of 216½ points and a scant 3½-point lead over Gary Crofut of Richwood.

The next event on the tournament calendar for Mid-America's Eastern Division will be the Indian Lake Invitational to be held Sept. 3 on Indian Lake near Lakeview.

Babe Ruth World Series Final Tonight

NEWARK, Ohio (AP) — Brilliant relief pitching by Greg O'Rear helped Huntsville, Ala., defeat New Orleans, La., 8-3 Friday night and advance to the finals of the Babe Ruth World Series baseball tournament.

Huntsville will meet unbeaten Brooklyn, N.Y., in the championship game Saturday night. Brooklyn needs just one victory to claim the title, while Huntsville, with one loss in the double elimination tournament, would have to beat Brooklyn twice to win the championship.

O'Rear was called into the game with one out in the top of the fifth inning and the score tied 3-3. He retired the next eight batters, striking out five.

Meanwhile, his teammates put Huntsville ahead 5-3 in the bottom of the inning with an RBI double by Kevin Cassidy and a run-scoring sacrifice fly by Jim Bureson.

Huntsville added two insurance runs in the sixth inning on two walks and singles by Ricky Moore and Bureson, the latter driving in two runs.

Kansas City Edges Orioles, 3-2

By BARRY WILNER

AP Sports Writer

"It's not how you look out there," said Kansas City left fielder Hal McRae. "If I had good looks, I'd be in Hollywood."

McRae was in Baltimore Friday night with the rest of the Royals, who won their 10th straight game, a club record, by edging the Orioles 3-2. McRae, who usually serves as the team's designated hitter because of his below-average defensive ability, made a key play in left field that helped the Royals maintain a three-game lead over Chicago and Minnesota in the American League West.

"I was playing fairly close and I think they were trying to take advantage of my arm," said McRae after he had cut short a Baltimore rally in the second inning by throwing out Mark Belanger at the plate after catching Al Bumbry's liner. "It didn't work.

"People keep saying there are things I can't do, and I guess throwing is one of them. But I get the job done and throw some people out."

McRae, the defending AL batting champion, did the job at bat as well, hitting his 17th home run to extend his hitting streak to 10 games.

In other American League games, New York rallied from a 5-1 deficit to nip Texas 6-5, Minnesota defeated

Boston 6-4, Chicago took Milwaukee 4-2, Seattle overcame Cleveland 4-2, California took 11 innings to top Detroit 7-4 and Oakland beat Toronto 8-4.

Yankees 6, Rangers 5
There were several heroes in New York's come-from-behind triumph. Willie Randolph's third hit of the contest, a double in the eighth, was followed by Mickey Rivers' single to tie the game. Then Graig Nettles tripled home Rivers with the game-winner.

Sparky Lyle pitched the ninth and picked up his fifth save in his last seven appearances and his 21st of the year. And Lou Piniella went 3-for-3, including his seventh home run, and also had a sacrifice fly.

The victory moved New York three games ahead of Boston and four in front of Baltimore in the AL East.

Twins 6, Red Sox 4

Tom Johnson pitched two innings of shutout relief and Rod Carew broke out of a mild slump with two doubles as Minnesota handed Boston its eighth loss in the last nine games.

Carew doubled off the left field wall in the fifth to drive in two runs, then doubled and scored the winning run on Lyman Bostock's single in the eighth. Johnson then shut the door on the Red Sox, who had rallied for three runs in the seventh.

White Sox 4, Brewers 2

Oscar Gamble's 28th home run of the year, a three-run blast in the first inning, powered Chicago past Milwaukee. Gamble also doubled and singled.

Steve Renko, whom the White Sox obtained from the crosstown Cubs just eight days ago, chalked up his second straight victory as an American Leaguer.

Mariners 4, Indians 2

A three-run rally in the ninth inning provided Seattle with only its third triumph in 19 games. Carlos Lopez' single tied it, then Craig Reynolds singled in the winning tally and Steve Braun doubled in the final run.

Enrique Romo, 6-9, hurled three innings of one-hit relief after John Montague came on in the first inning for faltering starter Paul Mitchell and pitched 51-3 innings of effective ball.

Angels 7, Tigers 4, 11 innings

Bobby Bonds took over the AL lead in home runs when he belted his 31st with a man on base in the 11th inning to lead the Angels over the Tigers.

Detroit tied it in the ninth on Aurelio Rodriguez' two-out double. Jerry Remy also blasted a homer for California and Bob Adams hit one out for Detroit.

A's 8, Blue Jays 4

Pedro Torrealba, 4-4, blanked Toronto on two hits over the final 42-3 innings as Oakland won its third straight. Mitchell Page drove in three runs, two with a double in the A's three-run sixth.

Reds, Dodgers Both Win

By TOM CANAVAN

AP Sports Writer

After 10 major league seasons, Tom Seaver finally has learned to do it the hard way...and win.

Seaver fired a five-hitter and struck out seven in recording his seventh straight victory Friday night as the Cincinnati Reds handed the Philadelphia Phillies their third consecutive loss, 4-2.

But those weren't the statistics that impressed the threetime Cy Young Award winner, who won his eighth game in 10 decisions since being traded to the Reds by the New York Mets June 15.

It was the walks.

"I can't ever remember walking eight and winning the game," said Seaver. "I was searching for my rhythm all night, but I don't think I ever found it. I was wild high and just outside of the strike zone."

Winning is something Seaver has become accustomed to with the Reds, who have won 10 of their last 13 games and now trail the Los Angeles Dodgers by 8½ games in the National League West race.

"We know we've got a chance to catch the Dodgers," said Dave Concepcion, who drove in the winning run for Cincinnati in the seventh inning to prevent Steve Carlton from getting his 19th victory of the season.

In other games, Los Angeles edged St. Louis 5-4, Pittsburgh topped San Diego 3-1, Houston shaded Montreal 6-5 in 10 innings, Atlanta defeated the New York Mets 5-3 in a game called after 6½ inning by rain and Chicago beat San Francisco 5-2.

Dodgers 5, Cardinals 4

Ron Cey and John Oates slugged home runs in support of Rick Rhoden's 15th victory of the season as the Los Angeles defeated St. Louis for only the third time in nine meetings this season.

Rhoden, 15-8, earned the victory despite giving up four runs on nine hits in 52-3 innings. Mike Garman, who hurled the final two innings, recorded his eighth save of the season.

Lou Brock of the Cards, needing one stolen base to match Ty Cobb's career record of 892 career thefts, was hitless in four at bats and was on base only once with a walk. He never got past first.

Pirates 3, Padres 1

Bruce Kison and Rich Gossage combined for a six-hitter and Dave Parker hit his 18th homer of the season

Hale Irwin Leads Hall Of Fame Classic

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Hale Irwin had a feeling things were going to change.

"I'd felt for a long, long time that I wasn't playing as poorly as my record would indicate," Irwin said, "and my record indicated poor play."

To that feeling he added a generous dash of grim determination and spiced it with his trademark, a career domination of the toughest golf courses this country has to offer.

The result was a spectacular, nine-under-par 62 on famed No. 2 at the Pinehurst Country Club, a 36-hole total of 127 that's the best in more than a decade of tour competition and just one stroke off the all-time record, and an imposing, fiveshot lead halfway through the $250,000 Hall of Fame Golf Classic.

"I came in here with a must-win situation," Irwin said Friday after posting his incredible 15 under par total on the 7,007-yard layout in the Carolina sandhills that has long been known as one of America's premier courses.

The tournament means a spot in next week's prestigious World Series of Golf. It's a sore point with Irwin, and a considerable embarrassment to the PGA Tour. Irwin was told he'd gained a place in the World Series after the spring portion of the tour closed with his victory in the Atlanta Classic May 29.

Irwin, content in that knowledge, arranged his schedule accordingly, taking some time off. Six weeks later he was told there had been a computer error in compiling statistics. He hadn't made it. Graham Marsh was in, and he was out.

Now he has to win here to make it. And he took a major step in that direction with his effort that matched the course record for 18 holes set in 1973 and was just one stroke off the all-

St. Louis Encephalitis Detected In Ohio

By The Associated Press
State health officials have verified that a case of St. Louis encephalitis, a viral disease carried by mosquitos that affects the brain, has been detected in Ohio.

Dr. Thomas Halpin, chief of the division of communicable diseases for the Ohio Department of Health, said a Cincinnati man has contacted the disease. It is the first reported case in the state this year.

Halpin said he believes the man is recovering. He is not worried about an epidemic.

"The disease usually has its residency in birds," Halpin said. "We have been intensively surveying the bird populations. We've found the virus to be at a very low level."

The disease is transferred to humans by mosquitos who have bitten infected birds. "It is only communicable through mosquitos," Halpin said.

"The virus has been nonexistent in mosquitos we've tested," said the health official, who says surveys have been conducted in 32 counties throughout the state.

"We don't expect an outbreak," he assured.

The culex pipiens is the scientific name for the insect that spreads the disease. It breeds in dirty, stagnant water like that which collects in old tires or open containers around junkyards, Halpin said.

Encephalitis usually is not fatal, Halpin said. Its symptoms vary. Some people experience headaches, followed by chills and fever. In rare, severe cases effects resemble those of a stroke, Halpin said. The inflicted may experience minor paralysis and slurred speech.

In summer 1975, during a national encephalitis epidemic, Ohio had more than 400 cases.

Halpin says there is no cure. The disease leaves the body after it has run its course, he said.

EAGLETES — Leaders have been chosen among the Eaglettes Drill Team and Baton Corps for the remainder of the year. Pictured are, standing: Anjanette Maxson, Talisha Stebleton, Sue Ann Bialy, Director, Trina Hill, LaNita Stebleton, and Tina Collins. Kneeling in the picture are: Kellie Lynn, Jodi Hardy, Sammi Wiggins, feature twirler, Shawn Kuhn, leader of the feature corp, Connie Yapple, and Staci Kuhn. The corps is preparing for the Labor Day Parade in Amanda, six more performances and parades. The corp thanks all the people who supported them by purchasing a bumper sticker. The corps will begin practicing at the Circleville F. O. E. Building and lessons will be given at the Knights of Columbus Building. Anyone interested in joining the group should contact Sue Ann Bialy at 983-4053 or Marjorie Wiggins at 474-4920.

Answers For Veterans

EDITOR'S NOTE: Each week the Circleville Herald will publish a series of questions and answers of interest to veterans. These questions and answers are some of the many presented to James P. Shea, Pickaway County Veterans Service Officer. Any veteran desiring further information concerning his Veterans Administration Benefits should contact the Veterans Service Officer at 219 South Court Street.

(Q.) Has the deadline passed for the Vietnam Bonus, and just exactly who is eligible for this bonus, and how much will they get?

(A.) The Ohio Viet Nam Bonus pays a maximum of $500 cash bonus or $1,000 educational assistance bonus to all eligible veterans of the Vietnam era, or a similar cash bonus to the next of kin of deceased veterans. In addition, the next of kin of veterans classified as MIA or KIA are entitled to a $1,000 cash bonus. The bonus is paid to living veterans, at the rate of $10 per month for stateside service, $15 per month for foreign service, and $20 per month for time served in Vietnam.

To be eligible, a veteran must have served honorably in the Republic of Vietnam from February 28, 1961 to July 1, 1973 and or served in the armed forces in any type of service (domestic, foreign, or Vietnam) from August 5, 1964 to July 1, 1973, and whose domicile was the State of Ohio for one full year prior to entry into active service.

The Deadline date for filing for the bonus is December 31, 1977.

(Q.) I am still carrying my National Service Life Insurance from World War II. However, if I remember correctly, my first wife was named as beneficiary and we are now divorced. I have requested in my current will, that my present wife get all insurance money. Will this be sufficient to get the National Service Life insurance for my second wife?

(A.) No it will not. Regardless of what your will reads, if your VA Insurance records show your first wife as beneficiary, even though you are divorced, she gets the money if you precede her in death. I would suggest that you complete a new Change of Beneficiary form immediately.

(Q.) I read in the paper the other day, that a veteran who is totally and permanently disabled is entitled to free hunting and fishing license. Is that true?

(A.) It is true as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. A veteran who is totally and permanently disabled is not entitled to the free hunting and fishing license unless he is receiving benefits from the VA. These benefits must be Total Non Service Connected Pension, or 100 per cent Service Connected Compensation.

Deputy Reports Injury Accident

The Pickaway County Sheriff's Office investigated a one car injury accident at 7:15 p.m. Friday in New Holland, approximately 300 feet west of Main St. on U.S. Route 22.

According to the report, Larry G. Funk, 27, New Holland, was eastbound on U.S. 22 and was in the process of passing another eastbound vehicle. He spotted an oncoming car and increased his speed to pull back into his lane, and at that time he lost control of the vehicle. The car slid into a fire hydrant owned by the village of New Holland.

Funk received a severe bruise to his left leg. A passenger in his car, six year old Larry G. Funk suffered a small laceration to his lip.

They were taken to Fayette County Memorial Hospital by the Fayette County Rescue Squad. Deputy J. R. Fite investigated the accident.

PCSO Probes Burglary, Theft

The Pickaway County Sheriff's Office investigated a breaking and entering of the B & B Stables Lounge, on U.S. Route 62 and Cemetery Road Friday.

The thieves entered the lounge through the rear doors sometime between 1:30 a.m. and 9 a.m. Friday. Once inside, they removed whiskey that had been stacked on shelves, and $122 in cash. The total value of the missing money and liquor was set at $385.

Friday.

But before election day arrives the 975 students in the two schools of this tiny northern Ohio town will be locked out early in October, possibly for the rest of the year, as the sting of a taxpayer revolt builds around the state.

As late as Aug. 16 voters here rejected a 9-mill school operating increase while the superintendent, Donald Halsey, was promising parents there would be no school without the money. Voters have rejected every school tax increase since 1968, Halsey says.

Many parents here claimed they voted against the levy because the district doesn't provide a good education.

"Three of my four children went to college. All three needed special tutoring because the school here didn't prepare them," said Jim Tyler, owner of Tyler's General Store, a business that's been in the family for 107 years.

Halsey agrees and apologizes. "Look, this is a small, rural school system. We know we're giving a minimal education. But we can't afford classes of three or four students taking calculus or psychology."

"We do lack a sound college prep course," Halsey said.

The 42-year-old Halsey has been on the job here for three years. He has a construction company background which he left to become business manager for a nearby school district.

Ohio's school financing problems show more quickly than in some states where law allows districts to operate in the red. Schools here must close before a deficit occurs.

Monroeville residents will vote again in November. "Schools will close permanently if that fails," Halsey said.

St. Louis Encephalitis Detected In Ohio

By The Associated Press
State health officials have verified that a case of St. Louis encephalitis, a viral disease carried by mosquitoes that affects the brain, has been detected in Ohio.

Dr. Thomas Halpin, chief of the division of communicable diseases for the Ohio Department of Health, said a Cincinnati man has contacted the disease. It is the first reported case in the state this year.

Halpin said he believes the man is recovering. He is not worried about an epidemic.

"The disease usually has its residency in birds," Halpin said. "We have been intensively surveying the bird populations. We've found the virus to be at a very low level."

The disease is transferred to humans by mosquitoes who have bitten infected birds. "It is only communicable through mosquitoes," Halpin said.

"The virus has been nonexistent in mosquitoes we've tested," said the health official, who says surveys have been conducted in 32 counties throughout the state.

"We don't expect an outbreak," he assured.

The culex pipiens is the scientific name for the insect that spreads the disease. It breeds in dirty, stagnant water like that which collects in old tires or open containers around junkyards, Halpin said.

Encephalitis usually is not fatal, Halpin said. Its symptoms vary. Some people experience headaches, followed by chills and fever. In rare, severe cases effects resemble those of a stroke, Halpin said. The infected may experience minor paralysis and slurred speech.

In summer 1975, during a national encephalitis epidemic, Ohio had more than 400 cases.

Halpin says there is no cure. The disease leaves the body after it has run its course, he said.

Warrensville Center Is Accredited

WARRENSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Warrensville Center has become the first mental retardation facility of the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to be accredited by the Joint Commission of Accreditation of Hospitals.

Director Timothy B. Moritz said the facility is one of the few in the country to be certified.

Certification means the two-year-old structure meets the standards set by the commission for care, treatment and environment of the residents.

Escapee At Large

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP) — One of two men who escaped from the Delaware County Jail remained at large Friday.

Authorities said 22-year-old Paul Westmore of Delaware was recaptured Friday afternoon as he walked along a rural highway south of the city limits. Charles Stahl, 38, of Columbus, remained at large.

Both men escaped Thursday night as they were being let out of a cell block to receive prescribed medication.

The pair was indicted July 29 by the Delaware County grand jury. Stahl is accused of two counts of forgery and Westmore charged with one count of receiving stolen property.

Answers For Veterans

EDITOR'S NOTE: Each week the Circleville Herald will publish a series of questions and answers of interest to veterans. These questions and answers are some of the many presented to James P. Shea, Pickaway County Veterans Service Officer. Any veteran desiring further information concerning his Veterans Administration Benefits should contact the Veterans Service Officer at 219 South Court Street.

(Q.) Has the deadline passed for the Vietnam Bonus, and just exactly who is eligible for this bonus, and how much will they get?

(A.) The Ohio Viet Nam Bonus pays a maximum of $500 cash bonus or $1,000 educational assistance bonus to all eligible veterans of the Vietnam era, or a similar cash bonus to the next of kin of deceased veterans. In addition, the next of kin of veterans classified as MIA or KIA are entitled to a $1,000 cash bonus. The bonus is paid to living veterans, at the rate of $10 per month for stateside service, $15 per month for foreign service, and $20 per month for time served in Vietnam.

To be eligible, a veteran must have served honorably in the Republic of Vietnam from February 28, 1961 to July 1, 1973 and/or served in the armed forces in any type of service (domestic, foreign, or Vietnam) from August 5, 1964 to July 1, 1973, and whose domicile was the State of Ohio for one full year prior to entry into active service.

Flames Destroy Bloomfield Home

The Harrison Twp. Fire Department battled a house fire at the Douglas Toole residence, 5016 S. Union St. in South Bloomfield at approximately 4:55 p.m. Friday.

According to the report filed by Deputy J. R. Fite, upon his arrival, the house was totally engulfed in flames. The fire apparently started from grease on the kitchen stove.

Five pieces of equipment were on the scene, but despite the efforts of firemen, the Toole family lost nearly all their possessions, managing to save only a few items from the house. The family's pet poodle dog was also killed in the blaze.

Six Harrison Twp. firemen were treated by the Harrison Twp. Emergency Squad for heat exhaustion.
